When the OECD was formed in 1961, tertiary education was not a leading concern of most member governments. Tertiary education, which was typically synonymous with university education, was not seen to be central to the well-being of most citizens or to the fortunes of national economies. Rather, it was a means of training members of learned professions, scholars, and civil servants.

LinkToContentAt: http://dx.doi.org/10.1787/9789264046535-6-en

Knowledge Type: Thematic report [1]
Other Tag: education system [2] labour market [3]
knowledge society [4]
lifelong learning [5]
regional development [6]
education policies [7]
higher education institutes [8]
leadership [9]
accountability [10]