As a part of the government strategy to promote economic growth, a National Innovation for Competitiveness Council (CNIC) was established in 2005. This was further strengthened in 2006, when a new pro-innovation law was passed, whereby mining companies are charged a royalty which is intended to feed an Innovation and Competitiveness Fund.

Country: Chile

LinkToContentAt: http://dx.doi.org/10.1787/9789264080355-38-en

Knowledge Type: Country report

Other Tag: public interest

- seed capital
- consultancy
- social capital
- labour skills
- early stage
- regional development
- entrepreneurship programmes
- training centres
- competitiveness
- innovation management

Parent URL: http://dx.doi.org/10.1787/9789264080355-en

Source URL: https://www.innovationpolicyplatform.org/document/chile-smes-entrepreneurship-and-innovation

Links

[1] https://www.innovationpolicyplatform.org/country/chile
[8] https://www.innovationpolicyplatform.org/topic/early-stage
[12] https://www.innovationpolicyplatform.org/topic/competitiveness